The good quality KEYHOLE photography of [REDACTED] permits detailed analysis of the Perm Aircraft Engine Plant Stalin 19 which has not been possible heretofore. It is noteworthy that on the south side of the plant area a large new building (approximately 640 by 320 feet in size), reported to be under construction when seen on [REDACTED] has been completed (Figure 1). An additional building of the same general dimensions (approximately 620 by 320 feet) has been built beside this building. These new additions increase the plant floor space by approximately 403,000 square feet. This plant is suspected as a producer of rocket motors.

A detailed report on this engine plant is currently in progress.
